The CPU usage is always set to 100% when the system starts, but I can't find any solution when I want to lower the frequency of the CPU with the following commands. Under /sys/devices/system/cpu/cpu0/cpufreq/scaling_cur_freq it is possible to set the current frequency of CPU. Setting frequency manually is not good in terms of functionality, so I tried to create a.conf file to set the frequency to "performance". When I try to run the command: echo performance > /sys/devices/system/cpu/cpu0/cpufreq/scaling_min_freq the system doesn't react and I get an error message saying that this path doesn't exist. After that I restart the computer. The frequency is always set to "performance" and I can't decrease or increase it using the commands in the.conf file. I found this old bug report at bugs.freedesktop.org with a lot of useful information, but
