3M International's F-Code or MediaCode is a part of a vehicle's VIN and is a unique identification code for each vehicle produced by 3M. The information can be found on the vehicle's left or right sides of the windshield, but is sometimes invisible to the naked eye. For example, the VIN on the driver's side of a typical car has 16 letters and numbers in a combination of uppercase and lowercase letters and numbers. There are also two or three letters that are not used, depending on the vehicle and model. There are different ways to access the Vehicle Identification Code by phone. It can be accessed by dialing 311 from most phones, if the vehicle was recently purchased, or by dialing 511 from most phones if the vehicle was never registered. In some cases, the VIN or MediaCode can be printed off of the windshield sticker, or the owner can request a copy of the VIN/MediaCode from a local distributor. 3M uses the F-Code on a variety of products, such as automotive, industrial, and building products. Why not try and correct the problem yourself rather than pay high repair bills when it can be avoided? The same can be said about your social security number, it is the key to many jobs and part of your personal information. If you keep your address private, you won't have a reason to worry about anyone looking up your Social Security Number. The key to keeping your Social Security Number private is to make sure your Social Security Number is not on any mail that goes to your home address. If you are unable to ensure that Social Security Number information is not on mail that goes to your home address, you must enclose the mail with a lock or security barrier that is over 5/8" thick, or erect a security fence, from which other items can be inspected. The easiest way to make sure you don't expose your Social Security Number on mail to your home address is to change your address through U.S. Post Office and the Social Security Administration. Don't rely on online entities for your safety - you never know who else might be looking. Changing your Social Security Number address with the U.S. Post Office takes time because the process must be completed through the proper channels. If you have already bought or sold a home and need to update your address in the system, call 866-634-2161
